

ALIEN WOMEN CROWD OFFICE OF MARSHAL

Hundreds Question Status Under New Edict from the President.

Hundreds of German alien women over the age of 14 years, who have become residents of the District since the United States declared war against the Huns, as well as those who came to Washington before hostilities broke out, crowded the office of Marshal O'Meara in the Emory Building all day yesterday in an endeavor to learn their status under the proclamation issued Saturday by President Wilson affecting alien enemy women.

Those of the former class, coming here since the declaration of war, were given until midnight last night to leave the city, while those who lived in the District prior to the declaration are given until May 5 to do so.

Hundreds to Leave City.
The women who visited Marshal O'Meara yesterday were equally divided between the two classes. By far the greater majority of them were alien women married to alien subjects, whose departure from this city took place some weeks ago. Very few American women who had married alien men were included in the gathering. Unable to give the exact number of German alien women living in the District, Marshal O'Meara said they were well up in the hundreds.

All the women yesterday deluged the Marshal with inquiries regarding their right to live within the District's limits, and in very few cases was their status such as to make this legal. The larger number who had to leave Washington at midnight last night or must do so by May 5, were either furnished the necessary papers to the Marshals of the zones where they are going or asked for their names for purposes of registration. Registration of those German females residing here before the war who did not visit the Marshal yesterday was also commenced. These will be asked to visit the Emory Building before May 5, and answer a number of questions including their age.

All Comply Willingly.
Although all those who saw Marshal O'Meara yesterday showed the utmost concern about their position under the proclamation, no objections were registered against the order, each seeming anxious to learn the fullest particulars about their own individual case and comply with orders. Most of the married alien women interviewed stated that they were simply remaining in the District until their husbands could get located elsewhere at which time they would send for them.

Through a ruling announced yesterday by the Department of Justice, Austro-Hungarian women residing in Washington are not affected by President Wilson's proclamation. Since the same procedure was followed in the case of Austro-Hungarian men some time ago, it was decided to let their women stay now.

Last Night at Theaters

Poli—"Getting Together."

What can best be described as a double premiere took place at Poli's last evening when the beautiful Avenue playhouse was restored to its former state as a leading theater of the National Capital, and the inspiring patriotic spectacle, "Getting Together," received its first production in this metropolis.

Old and intelligent playgoers who were present must have felt a thrill of satisfaction that able players should again tread the theater's boards, with its glorious memories of the past—of Irving and Terry, Mansfield, Lawrence Barrett, Modjeska, Z. S. Willard, Janussek—and of the evening's performance of "Getting Together" that was in every respect worthy of the traditions of the house.

The marked enthusiasm with which "Getting Together" was greeted by the first night's distinguished audience indicates that it will prove a popular attraction during the week. If your patriotism needs a little brushing up, if you are sort of lukewarm in your support of your country in its time of need, "Getting Together" will "get" you. It isn't, strictly speaking, a play—it's a number of incidents connected with a thread of story—the story being enacted solely by Blanche Bates and Holbrook Blinn. However, there is not a moment when "Getting Together" doesn't exercise a strong command of the attention.

The story has to do with "the eternal triangle." Blanche Bates and Holbrook Blinn, man and wife, have become estranged, but the world war brings the couple closer together and finally reunites them as each is "doing a bit" for the common cause. The scenic background is splendid in several instances. If producers had done nothing more than what they have succeeded in presenting a remarkably effective picture of the boys going over the top in the wake of a terrible tank spitting fire from its rapid fire guns and clearing a way. And the last act setting in a ruined French village is most artistic.

In the second act there is a Christening of the trenches, written by Percival Knight, and a remarkably well played by the author, with the assistance of Holbrook Blinn, Gustave Roland, Edward Martindel and Frederick Roland. Blanche Bates makes the most of the opportunities afforded her. Her acting has a certain quality of sincerity and individual charm combined with an artistic spirit. Mr. Blinn contributes an interesting characterization of an American captain in France, and Percival Knight lives up to his reputation as one of the funniest of English comedians.

A number of excellent songs of the trenches are rendered during the course of the play. "Getting Together," Mr. Knight scored endless encores for "I Want to Go Home," and Edward Martindel's resonant barytone was heard to advantage in "My Boy" and "The Road that Leads Back Home." "Old Pal of Mine," the sweet theme, number for John Thorne's sweet tenor, while Lieut. Gitz Rice had winners in "You've Got to Go in or Go Under," and "We Stopped Them on the Marne." Harry Blackmore and William Roselle were also "among those present."

"Getting Together" is given under the auspices of the British and Canadian recruiting mission, with the cooperation of the American military and naval forces. As war propaganda, "Getting Together" is most effective. It should result in our "getting together."

B. F. Keith's—Vandeville.
There are half a dozen stars at Keith's this week, but Uncle Sam is the headliner.

There's Frank Hogan, the prominent local attorney, and Manager Robbins boosting liberty bonds while a score of khaki-clad Camp Meigs boys sang "Over There" amid the cheers and whistles of the audience, the theater was the scene of a regular patriotic party last night.
When slim, pretty Elizabeth Brice of the glimmering smile, came out on the stage she was afraid that she wouldn't be able to get along "on her own" without a partner, Charley King, now being one of Mr. Danieles' men. After she had sung "Kissin' Me" and "That's the Kind of a Baby for Me" and thoroughly convinced the audience that she didn't really need a partner of any kind—way, then Miss Brice looked out over the house and there right in the second row was Charley, uniform and everything. And with a little persuasion he came up

HEROES OF ALL WARS WILL BE GIVEN HONOR

G. A. R. Approves Herald's
Suggestion for Greater Memorial Day.

Unqualified and high indorsement of The Washington Herald's plan to pay tribute to the nation's heroes of all wars past and present, in a city-wide observance of Memorial Day, on May 30, which will include the honoring not only of civil war dead, but those who have thus far laid their lives on the altar of democracy during the war with Germany, was given yesterday by Samuel G. Mawson, prominent Washington veteran of '61 and commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R.

Commander Mawson favors. Commander Mawson expressed himself as heartily in sympathy with The Washington Herald's program, stating that the latter could very well be made a part of his organization's exercises that day, immeasurably enlarging its significance and interest.

Commander Mawson had the following to say yesterday about the plan to make Washington the first in the land to observe Memorial Day as a time for paying tribute to America's dead soldiers of all wars:

"I am perfectly satisfied and think that we should show some recognition of the men who lost their lives fighting in this war with Germany. For more than forty years the G. A. R. has been conducting exercises at Arlington and other cemeteries about the city and for the last twenty years kindred organizations have joined with us in those demonstrations. I am in favor of holding memorial exercises for the men who have lost their lives in the present war, and I think such exercises should be held at Arlington in connection with the G. A. R. We will give this movement of The Herald all the support we can but I would suggest that it be merged with our own, both here and at Arlington."

Plan Generally Indorsed.
Already concurring in the plan are Commissioner Brownlow, Commissioner Gardner, A. Lettwith Sinclair, president of the Chamber of Commerce, W. T. Gallahan, president of the Board of Trade; M. A. Leese, president of the Retail Merchants' Association; Ross P. Andrews and Charles S. Shreve, president of the Federated Citizens' Association.

Details of the program to be worked out by a special committee of prominent citizens, include the customary parade of G. A. R. veterans, soldiers, sailors and marines stationed near the city, with an address, could it be arranged, by President Wilson, at the termination of the parade. War Department officials are willing, it is understood, to permit the parade to march through the city's streets.

A huge chorus, singing patriotic airs, is looked for among the events of the day. Cabinet members and members of both branches of Congress are invited to attend the demonstration, as will the Commissioners of the District.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Well-Known Local Druggist Says
Everybody Is Using Old-Time
Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and luster, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value their hair, and who desire a dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe. Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and luster and gives it an appearance of abundance. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for hair mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

PATROL WAGON DRIVERS MAY RANK AS POLICE

Local Police Chauffeurs
Subject of Bill by Representative Wheeler.

Patrol wagon drivers of the Metropolitan Police Department are hereafter to be considered as full-fledged members of the force, if the bill which passed the House yesterday is successful in the Senate.

Representative Wheeler is the author of the bill, and as a member of the House District Committee he said in his report that:

"The patrol drivers are compelled to work ten hours a day on duty in daytime, and fourteen a night when on night duty. The two shifts alternate weekly, and by this shifting of duty each driver is compelled to work twenty-four hours without time off for meals or recreation every second Sunday."

"The patrol drivers, while classed as chauffeurs, are really policemen. They are compelled to purchase their own uniforms which the department selects. They participate in every arrest made while they are on duty. They are compelled to risk their lives and subject themselves to the dangers incident upon handling prisoners and hurriedly driving to and from scenes of trouble."

"In fact they are policemen in every sense of the word and are compelled to do duty as policemen whenever occasion demands. But, in spite of this fact, and in view of the additional dangers to which they are subjected, they are deprived of the benefits of the pension and retirement provisions in force in the police department."

"There is no good reason why such a condition should exist. A majority of the patrol drivers have been in the service of the department for many years."

No Chilling Disappointment for the Man Whose Home Is Equipped With Our Modern and Efficient

Instantaneous Gas Water Heaters

FURNACES are out—the usual aid to supplying hot water throughout the home is not to be had. The result will be that hundreds of homes will be without that abundance of piping hot water that has been on tap all winter unless a perfect gas water heater is installed. The best indorsement of providing hot water by gas is the fact that thousands of persons now use it exclusively and would not be without it for any amount of money.

What Is a Home Without Piping Hot Water?

THE most rapid and economical system of heating water is the Automatic Instantaneous Water Heater—an appliance which is automatically operated and controlled by the opening and closing of a faucet on the hot-water line in any part of the house. Its installation is simple and the price a matter hardly to be considered when you think of the comfort and benefits to be derived the year round from its use.

SURETY COMPANY SUBSCRIBES TO LOAN

Through its finance committee, the National Surety Company, 115 Broadway, New York City, decided yesterday to subscribe $100,000 to the Third Liberty Loan.

This company has already subscribed $200,000 to the previous liberty loans; and President William H. Joyce and the company's other officers and employees subscribed another $100,000 personally.

In order to encourage further subscriptions to the new loan, Second Vice President and General Manager Joel Rathbone have sent out a circular letter to the company's 11,000 employees and agents, urging them to invest in the bonds, which are regarded as gilt-edged securities.
